It's...A Lost Generation ByAndre Iguodala On September 12, 1969, I was born in Nairobi, Kenya. Six months later, my parents purchased a beautiful house and moved us to a small town named Boonville, in northern California. I grew up in an American suburb and was exposed to suburbia from a young age. It was a place where everyone had a father and everyone was a worker, and people pulled up in a 'family's' station wagon or big Chevy Truck and would go to the gym after work. I loved the area and the town and everything about it, and even though I was not successful with academics in school, I was still going to school all the way through 12th grade and during that time, I became very familiar with my surroundings and it became my home. I was a 'regular' kid and in many ways I still am a regular kid. I used to drive my parents crazy when I was playing basketball. I was a tall kid
