The player movements generated using the HyperMotion Technology is said to make attacking moves, such as tackles and passes, feel "precise, smooth and true to life". It also makes players look and act like they would in real life, such as when making lunging tackles. The system aims to render more accurate goal decisions, and allows for more fluid animations. FIFA 19's player models also debuted this year, with Fifa 22 Product Key taking things one step further with the inclusion of "smooth, no-overlap animations and next-gen silhouette rendering." FIFA 22 also introduces the "FIFA Squad Experience," which is a new experience for the series. FIFA 22 features two new camera viewpoints—an "Overhead View" and a "Shot view." These changes aim to extend players' visual range while viewing a match, aiming to give players a more realistic perspective on the action. As per usual, FIFA 22 will also be receiving improvements to the three main modes: Matchday, Manager, and Online Seasons. The offline mode, FUT Champions, has also been upgraded to emphasize the game's competitive nature. "Ultimate Team" has received some new modes as well. FIFA 20 gave players the chance to play one or two matches to earn a player's goal statistics by picking out different formations, choosing different tactics and utilizing one of 21 kits, based on their favorite player. Players will be able to select a total of ten kits in FIFA 22. The selection includes an "All Star" team, comprised of all superstars in the game. This includes all-time greats, such as Cristiano Ronaldo, Wayne Rooney, and Lionel Messi. Players will be able to select one of three player licenses and several kits, but the goal will be to add as many all-time greats as possible. FIFA 20 Ultimate Team was a huge success, selling more than 2.4 million units and becoming the second best-selling game of 2018, behind Call of Duty: Black Ops 4. FUT Champions, however, was less successful, selling around 500,000 units after being released early in 2018. The title will be available for the Xbox One and PS4 consoles on October 10, 2018.
