Features Key:

Classic shuffle
Automatic mode

Test your luck in either standard or automatic mode. Keep the shuffle button pressed and start to gamble. While the game starts, wait until the game is really up and you will be able to unleash your best cards thanks to our cut-throat shuffling function. A silent and modern way to play POKER.

In automatic mode, Jerry Jobhopper will take care of the shuffling and pushing of cards. From time to time, he will also bring in some extras to spice up the game. Jerry was programmed to keep the player at bay.

Thru unique dual card playing feature he will insert either 5$ or 2$ instead of a jackpot card

Each time he knocks out a jackpot the chip is reset to 5$ or 2$. Keep in mind Jerry is a bad guy and you have to hold on to him for the long haul.

Unfortunately after a series of successful operations, Jerry has left for good and you will have to look for someone else to handle his duties.

POKER CUTTHROAT

PROMOTION TO SELECT YOUR GAME

QUICK LICENSE

CAPPY JOBHOPPER

Like you probably know Jerry has a heart as well as a soul. Unfortunately, he has a gambling problem and this you will have to deal with. All you have to do is control him and control him well. As long as you have his leash, Jerry will be on red alert and will be trying his best to snatch some jackpots from you. Don't let him do it though. You'll need to push his wheel from one side to the other to make him smoke pot.

Once you've done that stop him... he will then try to grab what's left for him.

I hope you'll enjoy the game!

Many adventure games, to match their setting, try to show as many hands as possible, often having the entire map shown at once. That was not the way in Taiji. It did not work out well when scanning the map while walking and trying to fix the camera on the exact spot. Therefore, we used only three pixels (font size) per tile. We want to tell a different story with a gameplay that is different than most traditional adventure games. It is very important to us that you play like a puzzle solver - try to discover the right move by trying each possibility of course. We are not against traditional adventure games and we would be happy to play such games with you, but do not expect this kind of gameplay in a puzzle game like Taiji. Also, we are not aiming for the casual audience. The basic approach in Taiji is to explore the world and solve as many puzzles as possible by moving around. You will do this by solving hundreds of puzzles. Each puzzle will have a unique solution that always depends on the locations you've already visited. You will encounter several kinds of puzzles, ranging from basic movement puzzles (moving objects) to timed puzzles (for example pressing a button at the right time to release a door). Many puzzles will have multiple solutions, depending on which order you visit them. The only real way to solve puzzles is to walk around, explore, and try different tactics. This might seem complicated, but there are no permanent solutions in Taiji and you can come back to puzzles solved at any point in your exploration. Even in more linear games, there is no explicit path that you have to follow - it is up to you how to progress. In Taiji, every puzzle is solved by applying a rule to a set of tiles. There is no secret code you have to crack, no complex equation to be solved, and no mystery of a hidden object to find. Every tile in the game can be toggled on or off, and every puzzle will only make sense when all tiles are switched on. There are no random encounters in Taiji, the story progression is linear. However, you will encounter a variety of threats in the environment, ranging from enemy monsters to traps. Many puzzles in the game rely on the correct timing of your actions in order to survive. The game is set in a world of crystal, and requires you to avoid danger by either freezing them, or trapping them in fields with a laser beam. As they are frozen, crystals can

It's a beautiful day, August 11, 1988, for us locals. My grandmother told me that Oregon's weather is usually seasonal. For the last two years, it's been occasionally hot and humid and wet enough to reflect the clouds with a shimmering gold. We've just spent the last month or so in the high 50s and 60s-light showers, heavy winds, drought, no ice in the rivers. Today, it's near 80 with light winds and high humidity. Nothing different than what you'd have in Indiana, eh? But mom and dad have tickets to a Braves game and tickets to a fishing trip in Deschutes County. They wouldn't give us two choices! I know just how hard dad is going to be to persuade! Though I already know the deal is a battle, I know before the day is over, he'll say yes. "Guess what," she says brightly, "tomorrow, she has piano lessons until five. She'll join us for lunch at Aunt Pennie's. We'll get some sleep and then set off bright and early for Deschutes." The inaugural destination? Hellfire, a 70,000-acre forest that almost always is blazing. Their relationship with the forest is as complicated as their relationship with me. Dad's father used to live in a little three-room brick house on a dirt road no longer there. The street is now paved, but he's still called the house the "old homestead." His family got out of the county after a small fire. They'd find a good spot, time someone to draw a new survey, and make a legal move. The Homestead Act originally declared the land open, and the cattlemen did the occasional roundup. In recent years, people with no connection to the forest have claimed title to property in bands. This includes wildfires and treks taken by recreational recreationists, loggers (unless they're hired by the US Forest Service), and wildfires that are neither more nor less predictable than any other fire. Folks who live on the land are hunting and fishing and camping and dog-sitting. The Hacks, perched in the middle of the forest, are the only access point for the half-a-thousand residents. When I was growing up, all of Oregon
