The subproject and investigator (PI) may have received primary funding from another NIH source, and thus could be represented in other CRISP entries. The institution listed is for the Center, which is not necessarily the institution for the investigator. The biological functions of the highly conserved, multisubunit RNA polymerase II (RNAPII) are determined by its RNAPII-associated proteins, some of which are encoded by host or exogenous genes. The question of how the host provides selectivity to RNAPII remains a mystery. We have found that the host specifically inhibits (occurs less frequently than 10(-4) in the non-transcribed portion of the genome) insertion of PolIII into promoters that control the expression of host genes. This study was published in Molecular Cell (Liu, W. J. et al. (2005) "Targeted insertion of Pol II into a non-transcribed genome region results in host gene silencing" Cell 124, 765-779).
