I'm currently using System.IO.File.GetFileInfo to get a lot of file information (such as the file name, size etc.) But I want to be able to download the file from server. Of course, I can use WebClient, but I'm using ActiveX control and I don't want to use an iframe to load a page with the source code of the website. Is there a built-in way of doing that? A: You can grab the "raw" stream from the HttpResponseMessage and save it with a StreamWriter. (Or read the headers and save those and the response stream). Of course, there is a download here (and no way to get the headers from it). EDIT: After making a little research and testing it looks like there is no easy way to do this. The WebClient class doesn't seem to have any way to do this and it also doesn't have a way to save the
